Rogue Readers,

1. My Last Newsletter?
2. Rogue Neptune

1. My Last Newsletter?

I spent 2 hours writing a thoughtful treatise on the current state of affairs in the world. Then my clumsy fingers deleted it. Then I realized that my campaign hosting editor doesn't allow redos. So, I lost it all. Fine. You don't need another opinion among the billions anyway.

This might be my last newsletter, and Rogue Neptune may be my last book. Reality is now wilder than fiction. So, why bother?

I also expect some sort of civil unrest when the electors are read January 6. Tens of millions of Americans will be furious with tens of millions of Americans, regardless of which way it goes. Will anyone be reading fiction?

No, everyone will be choosing sides. If you haven't already, you're running out of middle ground, and a side will be chosen for you.

If you're worn down by the hatred spewed by CNN/MSN/FB and looking for conservative perspectives, try these:

I can't say who's truthful and who's lying, but counterpoints help shape the truth. Moreover, they can even ease your fear of COVID, since these sources present evidence of how it's under much better control than major media claims.

2. Rogue Neptune

It's 80% done and will be drafted in January for first readers. Then Rogue Outlaws and Rogue Neptune will be out by March.

Thanks for reading! - John
